Foreword

1408262

The purpose of this volume is to trace the genealogical history of the SLASON-SLAUSON-SLAWSON-SLOSSON family from the time the original settler landed in America to the present day, and showing, to the extent the compiler has been able to ascertain, all the descendants of this progenitor who bear the family name by one or another of the various spellings. No effort has been made to trace down the affiliated families, bearing other names, as such a stupendous labor would require more time, effort and research than the compiler could spare from his business.

This work, as now presented, is the result of over eighteen years of assembling data from a large number of sources, cross-checking wherever possible, and finally welded into a composite whole for the benefit of all the members of the family, and for their descendants who may even be still unborn.

Sources of Information . . .

After a very brief stay in Massachusetts, the original members of the family settled in Connecticut, and as long as they remained in that state the records are comparatively easy to obtain. Numerous histories, such as Huntingdon's "History of Stamford", do much to trace the early families, and this information is easily substantiated by the fact that Connecticut required the filing of birth and marriage records even from the earliest days. These records are on file with the town clerks, and are also recorded by the State of Connecticut in Hartford. Many of the Church records are still intact. On occasions a birth would not be recorded, but such an event is comparatively rare, and only a very few have been proved. However, once the line was crossed into nearby New York state, the work of compiling the records immediately struck a serious snag. New York was one of the most backward states in the country with respect to the filing of birth or marriage records (no state in the early days was very strong on death records), and no effort was made to obtain or file this information until late in the nineteenth century. Since many members of the family took up residence in New York, beginning in the late 1600s, the tracking down of this information has been a long and tedious work. Many of the early church records have disappeared completely, for one reason or another. Chief among the causes of disappearance are: fire, as the prominence of church steeples frequently led to their being struck by lightning; destruction, as the result of the Revolutionary War, etc.; and obliteration or disintegration, as the result of lack of care or the storage in leaky attics or damp cellars. This is all based on the assumption that the records were actually kept in the first place. Too often, the early ministers were not particularly erudite or did not bother to keep them, either from laziness, or because the ministry did not make up a full time job, and the minister was compelled to be a farmer six days a week in order to obtain the wherewithal to live, and did not devote the time to keep records. Too large a number therefore kept no records at all for one of these reasons. Other ministers kept meticulous records, but considered them a personal rather than a community affair. These were usually kept in the form of account books, showing how much money the minister received for a wedding, a baptism or a funeral, and as account books, they were held by the minister in his home, moved from town to town as he moved, and were considered part of his personal property upon his death. Sometimes these were preserved by the members of his family and sometimes were consigned to the rubbish pile. And as a final cause for the disappearance of church records, there are several instances where individual sects in particular towns fell into declines, frequently resulting in the church either disbanding, or being run on a part time basis by some minister covering several charges. Usually in such an event, the records were turned over to one of the elders, deacons, or whatever governing body the particular creed indulged in, and were supposedly safely left in his care. Frequently the person so selected was an old and respected member, and his age worked against him—for he died in a comparatively short time, and the records had a tendency to disappear. The lack of all state or town records, and the frequent lack of church records made New York state a very difficult location from which to assemble data. Engraved tombstones from the period prior to the Revolution are very rare, as most of the persons who died had their graves marked either with a wooden board, which has long since fallen victim to the ravages of time; or else by a fieldstone, either unmarked, or possibly with initials crudely and laboriously scratched on by some member of the bereaved family. There remains, however, certain other sources of information on which the compiler was forced to draw. The probate records, with the wills of deceased members of the family mentioning his sons and daughters by name, sometimes the name of the spouse, and occasionally grandchildren, various in-laws, etc. Land records frequently yield the names of wives, or other relationships. Early historians have added to the fragmentary knowledge, and genealogies of affiliated families have assisted by the addition of miscellaneous bits. One of the best sources has been the records assembled by by-gone members of the family, who, a hundred years ago were even then trying to eke out the family history, and utilized the posts of that day for contacting the older members of the family in an effort to obtain names, dates and places which these old-time members had either in their heads or in Family Bibles. (Most of the Family Bibles antedating about 1760 are now missing.) From this maze of information, frequently with only approximate dates (so noted in the text) and occasionally with conflicting dates (also so noted in the text) has come into being the early history of the New York state section of the family. Some has been omitted, either from lack of obtaining the information, or because the compiler has been unable to obtain substantiation for claimed relationships. The infant mortality rate, as recorded herein, is much higher in Connecticut than in New York. This was caused not by any beneficial result obtained by living on the New York side of the line, but because children who died young frequently left no trace of their existence when born in New York state. Any omissions from these early records have no bearing, however, on the family today, as the living members of the family checked exactly with the 1790 census for families bearing the name by any of its various spellings, and all omissions, wherever born, were either of males whose line, if any, died out prior to 1790, or of females who either died or married (thereby losing their identities as parts of the family name).

After 1790 the records gradually undergo a change. More and more the family spread out. Persons were recorded as being born, and are then lost track of, as they migrate westward in search of land or fortune. Sometimes these people are never heard from again. On other occasions the compiler has encountered branches of the family whose Bibles or other records trace back to these persons formerly lost, in which case the record clears itself. However, there are still members of the family whose migrations have never been solved, and they may have died with or without descendants. The compiler has also encountered whole groups of members of the family for whom no connecting link with the early members of the family can be found. These groups have, perforce, been omitted, even though the compiler is convinced the connection link exists, if it could only be unearthed.

Following the clearing house formed by the first census (1790), the methods of obtaining the desired information have increased. The census records every ten years have been a great help. Family Bibles are numerous, yea, common. Gravestones exist in large numbers. Probate, surrogate, other court or land records are clearer and more readily found. Church records, cemetery records and town vital statistics records are available in greater and greater profusion. The compiler has personally traveled through the entire forty-eight states, most of them on several occasions, in an effort to compile the information. He has personally talked with over a thousand members of the family, many of the older members of whom have passed away in the years required to assemble this work. Much of the information thus received would have been otherwise lost. These old-time members, particularly those who formed the vanguard of early settlers in previously unsettled wildernesses, were able to give names of their grandparents, uncles, aunts, etc., whom the present generation never heard of or about whom they are very vague. This type of information seldom yields dates or other reliable data of that nature, but it has on many occasions supplied the clues to where the information can be obtained. For the very recent information, much of it has been received either by personal contact or by correspondence with the persons actually involved.

The compiler is not foolish enough to claim that there is no possibility of error in this book, particularly with reference to exact dates as given by individuals and which can not be proven by any official records. There is also the possibility of human error on the part of the compiler in copying, etc. However, the compiler likes to believe that such errors as may come to light in the course of time will be few and far between, and almost entirely limited to minor differences of date, etc.

After eighteen years of travelling the country, talking to members of the family, delving into old and usually dusty records, flitting ghoul-like through hundreds of cemeteries that are sometimes given over to brambles, being forced to use some of the worst hotel accommodations known to man, or even sleeping in his automobile, eating if and when a so-called restaurant was available and sometimes just plain not eating, encountering every kind of weather and road condition, including being bogged in mud, filling in washouts that made roads impassable, wading swamps with trousers rolled up and footgear in hand—after eighteen years of searching out data in city, village and rural spots, some of which are nearly inaccessable, the compiler presents herewith "The Slason-Slauson-Slawson-Slosson Family". He knows it is not complete, several branches of the family having been omitted for one reason or another; but to someone else must go the task of carrying on if it is ever to be brought to a total, one hundred percent, completion—which the compiler believes to be an impossibility.

Appreciation . . .

The compiler desires to express his appreciation for the assistance and cooperation extended him by many members of the family who assisted in the compilation of data on their particular branches of the family. To list all those who helped in varying degrees would be impracticable, but he extends his thanks to each and every one who lent his aid. The compiler is also indebted to those historians and genealogists whose works helped and clarified these records by mentioning members of this family.

But to a certain few persons go especial credit and appreciation for the unusually large and important contributions they have made toward the completion of this work. Two previously recorded genealogies each covering a portion of the family were gathered in, almost in toto, and incorporated in this volume. These are:

"The History of the Slason Family" by James A. Slason (3000).

"A Genealogical Memoir of Nathaniel Slosson, 1638—1896", originally compiled by D. Williams Patterson and published in the "New York Genealogical and Biographical Record" during 1872 and enlarged, brought up to date and put into book form in 1896 by Anna Tomlinson Banks Slosson (899).

Of the individuals whose own efforts, either at compiling a genealogy, or who were willing to give of their time and such expense as might be involved in travelling, writing, etc., were extremely helpful, the compiler wishes to express his sincere thanks to the following:

John Wallace Slawson (2066) of White Plains, New York.
Chester Baker Slawson (3299) of Ann Arbor, Michigan.
Arthur Riley (deceased) of Ashley, Ohio, son of Lucy Slawson Riley (1381).

Introduction

In the body of this volume are contained the life data on the members of the family, but contained there is also the basis of four pertinent questions, the answers to which would be omitted except for this introduction. These four questions have been submitted to the compiler many hundreds of times, and are worthy of careful and accurate answers. The questions are: (1) Which is the correct spelling of the name (2) Where did the family come from originally? (3) Are all members of the family in America related and descended from a single common ancestor, regardless of the spelling of the name? (4) Where did the family first settle in America?

To these four main questions are often added others concerning religion, occupation, and similar sweeping classifications which can not be answered with any few concise words.

However, an effort will be made to answer each of the above questions, in order.

THE SPELLING OF THE NAME . . .

There is no "correct" spelling of the name.

During the seventeenth century spelling did not follow the fixed lines to which it is today subjected. Each individual spelled phonetically, or as it sounded to him. Frequently the individual would spell the name differently on different occasions, and as an illustration of this your attention is called to the marriage covenant between the original progenitor, George (1), and his second wife. This agreement was drawn up by the town clerk (a supposedly well educated man) in his official capacity. In it, the name "George" is spelled in four different ways. If a simple name such as "George" can be spelled four different ways on a single document written by a single individual, it is not particularly surprising that the methods of spelling the family name should differ among many individuals, combined with the renderings of the various officials of the towns and churches with whom they came in contact, not to mention the frequently abortive efforts of revolutionary adjudents, who were not always possessed of more than the rudimentary essentials in the art of writing. The compiler has encountered fourteen methods of spelling our much disputed family name, although as far as can be ascertained only six of them were ever actually used by the members of the family, the others being gratuitously donated by others, and although never officially accepted, show on the records and must receive consideration.

These spellings consist as follows:

1—SLASEN	5—SLAUGHSON	9—SLOSEN
2—SLASON	6—SLAUSON	10—SLOSON
3—SLASONS	7—SLAUSSON	11—SLOSSON
4—SLASSON	8—SLAWSON	12—SLOSSEN
13—SLOSSIN		14—SLOSSMAN*

* Not to be confused with family of this name. Used only once on records seen by compiler.

Numbers 1, 4, 9, and 10 were used by both officials (town or church) and by adjutants. Numbers 3 and 14 were obvious errors on the part of adjutants, who enrolled men by the name of SLASON and discharged the same individuals by different names. Number 13 was a rendition by a Revolutionary payroll officer. The especially odd number 5 was a sound phonetic masterpiece by a Dutchman serving as an adjutant.

The remaining methods of spelling, numbers 2, 6, 7, 8, 11, and 12, actually saw usage by members of the family. The SLOSSEN method was used apparently by only one individual, who, although quite well aware that his branch of the family used SLOSSON, resided in a section of the country mainly settled by Scandinavian, in which locality the most common names were Hansen, Olsen, Petersen, etc., and he found it easier and less trouble to adopt an E instead of the final O. The SLAUSSON spelling was apparently limited to three children, members of a large family, but their reason for differing is unknown. The remaining four methods are comparatively numerous and form the title for this, "The Slason-Slauson-Slawson-Slosson Family".

The original spelling of the name (after being Anglicized), and before it came to this country, was SLAWSON. When George Slawson (1) came to America, it was so spelled in Lynn, Mass., and in Sandwich, Mass., and it was not until his arrival in Stamford in 1642 that the first variation occured. In Stamford, the town clerk entered the name (and quite possibly so at its owner's instigation, as he was an educated man) as SLASON. Thereafter, for over a hundred years, the town clerks of Stamford so spelled the name with a fine disregard for whatever method the possessor of the name might prefer. George, himself, signed his name on several documents—witnesses to treaties with the Indians, and various legal documents—and his signature is known with both spellings, although the SLAWSON spelling is predominant. In the course of time, the spelling of the town clerks of Stamford was quite widely accepted, but as it gave too easy rise to improper pronunciation, the majority of the family inserted either a U or a W in the middle to force correct pronunciation. Today, SLASON is the least common of the four methods of spelling the name, and the compiler has noted that many of the younger generation have given up the struggle on pronunciation, and today answer to the name as though it rhymed with "mason". The SLAUSON spelling came also from another source besides the one outlined above. It is a peculiarity of handwriting that the letters "WS" are difficult to form, and that of "US" are not. Purely as a convenience and aid to easier manipulation, many members of the family changed from SLAWSON to SLAUSON, and on several occasions the compiler has encountered both methods in use by children of one family. The SLOSSON method of spelling received a comparatively late start in America, being unknown prior to 1739. During this year a group of families moved from Norwalk, Conn., to form a new settlement at Kent, Conn.; among them being the family of Nathaniel Slason. On their arrival at Kent, one of their number was elected town clerk, and his first entry showed the families who had arrived at this new project. Among these is the family of Nathaniel Slosson, all of whose descendants still use this particular spelling. Also, in 1781, there was born a Henry Slawson, who later decided to become Henry Slosson, although the compiler does not know what influenced this change.

By about 1800 the various methods of spelling the name had become pretty well fixed in the various channels, and, except for occasional changes from SLAWSON to SLAUSON, few individuals varied the routine in vogue for their particular branches of the family.

This covers the salient points on the subject of the spelling of the name since it has been in America, but still leaves its preceding variations to be treated under the following heading.

WHERE THE FAMILY CAME FROM . . .

George Slawson (1) and his brother, Thomas (2), came from England.

Because no record can be found stating explicitly where he came from, there has arisen a considerable confusion. However, the statement that he came from England is a positive assertion made in the face of a tremendous variety of assorted opinions on the subject as advanced by various members of the family with whom the compiler has conversed. Each branch—yea, twig—of the family tree has ideas of its own where the family name originated, and the compiler has been solemnly assured that the name came from most of the western European nations, including the following: England, Scotland, Wales, Ireland, Holland, Sweden (or Norway), Denmark, Germany, Bavaria, France and Alsace. A few of these ideas are pretty far fetched, and such details as the fact that the name cannot be pronounced in either French or Alsatian was ignored by its proponents. Wales, in the early sixteen hundreds, used the Welsh language exclusively, and the same difficulty was present. Therefore, although Wales is one of the more prevalent beliefs, it just does not fit, combined with the fact that no Slawsons (by any spelling) are recorded to have resided within its borders. This last item, incidentally, applies to every country (except England) prior to at least 1650, but is overlooked by the holders of various theories. However, there are other valid objections to the other countries incorrectly claimed as the country of the family origin. The Scandinavian countries of Sweden, Norway and Denmark form a rather localized belief, and is apparently centered in a group of the family who reside in that part of the country which was largely settled by Swedes. The basis of the argument seems to rest on the fact that the family name ends in "SON" as do many Scandinavian names. There seems to be no other basis for this theory. The arguments in favor of Holland are based entirely on a well-known history of Westchester County, New York, which states that Jonathan Slawson (9) came from Holland. This astounding statement is in direct opposition to many other histories, and is proved incorrect by the birth record of Jonathan, which was duly recorded in Stamford, Connecticut. In spite of all the evidence to the contrary, this misstatement crops up at regular intervals to plague the compiler. The Scotch and Irish had not started their migrations to the "New World" as early as 1636, and such few individuals as did arrive were not accepted into the Puritan Church, as was George Slawson (1). Germany, as such, did not exist at this time, and Bavarian Puritans were unknown.

Then, too, there is the mental attitude of the settlers at that period to be considered. They did not migrate here with any ideas of freedom of religion. It was to be free to worship in the method preferred by their own religion, and they were extremely intolerant of any other religion, even passing laws calling for the banishment from the colony "of any Quaker, ranter, or other heretic". Combined with a religious fervor that amounted practically to fanaticism, was an intense pride in their rights "as Englishmen" and such great care was exercised in extending the privilege of voting and holding office that only about ten percent of the population qualified. Foreigners—including the Scotch, Welsh and Irish—were thus automatically excluded from positions of responsibility or trust. Yet George Slawson (1) was an officer of the Church, usually held one or another civic office, and was selected by Englishmen to forward the interests of his fellow Englishmen, both as a representative to the General Assembly, and on such vital matters as the drawing of treaties with the Indians.

All of the above substantiates the statement that George Slawson (1) came from England.* And; there were Slawsons in England, and they had been there for some hundreds of years!

The persons with whom George Slawson (1) associated for the major portion of his life were mostly emigrants from the county of Surry. Based on the idea that persons of long acquaintance, similarity of opinion or other things in common have a tendency to stay together in the face of unknown dangers, he records of Surry were investigated—and records of Slawsons were found. On the basis of dates, the only logical record is that on May 13, 1610, Richard Slawson married Anne Angell at St. Saviour's Church, in the village of Southwark, Surry. George Slawson (1) was born within the next seven years, and the compiler is of the opinion that both George (1) and Thomas (2) were the children of this union. It is regretted that birth records were not considered essential enough to require filing, so it seems improbable that this belief can ever be satisfactorily proven.

However, another point is now evident. Richard Slawson's name on the records was spelled SLAWSON, but there is nothing to prove that he wrote it so—or even know how to write. There is, however, ample evidence to prove that this spelling continued to exist in England, and later migrations to America have been made by individuals using this spelling. However, from the spellings used on tombstones, it would seem that the SLAWSON spelling was an Anglicized version of SLOSSON, which, according to information obtained by the compiler in the United States (without going to England to check it), was known as early as the twelfth century. There seems to be little doubt that this spelling was in use considerably earlier than 1600, and no evidence to prove it had not been completely abandoned in favor of SLAWSON by that date. In 1739 this spelling was again put into use, this time in America—and it is in active use here today, but is apparently unknown in England.

Any attempt to delve into the dimness of time prior to the twelfth century is largely pure guesswork—and your guess is as good as the compiler's. The compiler has spent little time on this phase of the family history but suspects the name was originally the Teutonic word "SCHLOSS" (meaning "castle"), and, like so many other names, was first adapted to English by dropping the CH, thus producing SLOSS. In the normal course of the generations, there was added the common "SON", or, in this particular case "ON" in order to prevent a triple "S". Just what connection that original forebear had to a "castle" is, of course, unknown.

Of interest to most members of the family is the answer to the question: How did George Slawson (1) and Thomas Slawson (2) reach America? It is because of doubt in connection with this that all the differences have arisen concerning the country of origin. And to this day, the matter remains unsettled.

*—cp. "Whitney Family of Connecticut"—"The Slawsons were of English yeoman stock".

The whole problem centers on the fact that the family name does not show on the passenger list for any ship coming to America before the time George (1) and Thomas (2) were known to be here. Since comparatively few ships came to Massachusetts—or elsewhere in America—during the less than two decades that elapsed after the Pilgrims landed on Plymouth Rock, it is not a difficult task to check the lists, and many persons have tried with no success. The problem has baffled all persons seeking genealogical data on the family—and it is still baffling. In an effort to explain this apparent impasse, various persons have given voice to some pretty flighty bits of vivid imagination, a few theories that will account for some but not all of the known facts, and one entirely logical explanation that is quite probably correct. Before giving the logical explanation, the compiler would like to show to what extent fancy will go when the originator of a theory leaves the realm of facts. Since none of these fancies are prevalent in more than a small portion of the family, the other portions have probably not encountered these particular "explanations" of how the first member of the family reached America. (Usually this refers to George (1) only; and Thomas (2) is either ignored completely, or else multiplied.)

The compiler specifically denies that George Slawson was captured as a baby from the Plymouth Colony by Indians. Nor did he adopt the name from lack of knowledge of his real name when he obtained his freedom from the Indians on attaining manhood. This theory is lurid and untrue. There were no such captures, and although George Slawson later had a hand in the drawing of a few treaties with the Indians, he apparently had no more comprehensive a knowledge of their customs and traits than had his other English associates.

Equally outrageous is the theory that as the younger son (Ed. Note—Why "younger"?) of an English Lord he supported a pretender to the Crown, and left England a jump or two ahead of the King's bailiffs. Supposedly, according to this theory, he changed his name when boarding ship, and for safety's sake, again changed it when he debarked in America. The compiler believes this weird set of circumstances would scarcely produce the type of individual who would become the solid—and stolid—citizen that George Slawson became.

Also, there is nothing to substantiate either of the mystic numbers of three or seven. There were not three brothers—or seven—involved in the family migration to America. These two figures are bandied freely in every family, whether it be ours, or the Smiths, or the Browns. Even when doctored up with fancy details, the story is illogical and contrary to known facts. For an illustration, there is the story of the three brothers who owned their own ship. One was supposedly Captain of the vessel, another was en route in the ship to handle business at the western end of the enterprise, and the third remained in England to handle the eastern end. In this theory, the ship was wrecked on the New England coast, and the two brothers made their way to land, and thus arrived without being on any passenger list. An ingenious story that would be better believed if any member of the family had owned a ship, or if such a wreck had been recorded.

After weeding out about a score of such interesting and absurd theories, there seems to be but one plausible explanation left.

Apparently neither George (1) nor Thomas (2) were too well equipped with funds, and being unable to afford passage, they shipped on as sailors. Upon reaching America they went ashore and stayed out of sight until the ship sailed without them. This was not an unusual occurrence, as the ships' records show they frequently left America with only a portion of their crews. It would also explain why the names were not on the passenger list. This explanation is much more prosaic and less theatrical than tales involving abduction by Indians, or fleeing to an English province to escape the wrath of an English King, but the compiler believes it to be in all probability the correct answer.

ARE ALL MEMBERS OF THE FAMILY NAME DESCENDED FROM A SINGLE PROGENITOR . . .

The answer to this is a definite "no", although the exceptions to this are few, and all so far found are applicable to the SLAWSON method of spelling the name. Any person in the United States (barring irregularities caused by adoption) using the spellings of SLASON, SLAUSON or SLOSSON trace back to George Slawson (1), as do most of those using the SLAWSON spelling. The known exceptions are as follows:

Two separate SLAWSON families have come to America from England since the Civil War. One of these settled at Canisteo, New York; and the other at St. Paul, Minnesota. They are both apparently descendants of the SLAWSONS who remained in England after George Slawson (1) came to America.

There is also the family of one Dr. John Slawson, who emigrated from Poland to America a comparatively few years ago. His paternal grandfather settled in Poland after being honorably discharged from the Prussian Army following the War of 1870; although how he came to be serving in this army is not known to the compiler, as he was apparently born in England. He married a Jewish girl, as did his son. The grandson, who is Dr. John Slawson, is today one of the key figures in Jewish Welfare Relief.

There are also the descendants of one Abraham Schlessinger, who changed his name in court to Alexander Slawson. Although he is now dead, his three sons reside in New York City, and use the name of SLAWSON.

Also certain colored slaves, upon being freed and granted the use of last names (not permitted during slavery) honored themselves, and their former masters, by adopting the name of SLAWSON.

All other persons of the name currently in the United States are apparently connected, by blood or adoption, although the compiler has been forced to omit a few because of his inability to prove the connecting links.

THE PLACES OF SETTLEMENT . . .

Although George Slawson (1) stayed briefly at both Lynn, Massachusetts, and Sandwich, Massachusetts, the larger portion of his life was spent at Stamford, Connecticut, and it is in this neighborhood that the family really had its origin on this continent.

Stamford in its early days occupied much more space than its current boundaries would indicate. Located in the protruding southwest corner of the state, it took in the area now comprising the present townships of Stamford, Darien, a large portion of New Canaan, part of Greenwich, and laid claim to part of the townships of Poundridge, Bedford, North Castle and Lewisboro. These last four towns are now all in New York State, but in the late sixteen hundreds the colony line was largely a matter of conjecture and Stamford was not averse to claiming as much land (and the taxes thereon) as there was any possibility of holding. In fact, Lewisboro was for many years called the "Oblong" and was the subject of much heated dispute between Connecticut and New York until the boundary was finally settled in 1731.

Included in these townships are several villages or settlements which enter into this genealogy in one way or another. Among these are the following: Highridge and Glenbrook in the town of Stamford; Noroton in the township of Darien (which was itself formerly the Middlesex section of Stamford); Silvermine in the township of New Canaan; Salem in the township of Lewisboro (although it extended into the township of North Salem); and Middle Patent in the township of North Castle. All of these places could be included in a circle with a radius of less than four miles! It is therefore not at all surprising that even the early generations of the family showed a tendency to fluctuate from one town to another, and because the colony line ran through this settlement group, there was a tendency to be on one side of the unsettled line at one time and on the other side at another.

As long as the members of the family stayed on the Connecticut side of the line, or as long as the line did not move, thus putting an individual's home in New York, it is a matter of comparative ease to trace the births and marriages, as registration in Connecticut was compulsory. However, once an individual became a resident of New York the work of the compiler multiplied many times, because New York kept no compulsory records until late in the nineteenth century. In spite of the small differences in locations, which produced so much variance in points of settlement, the family can definitely be called a Stamford, Connecticut, family.

Religion . . .

Religion was, of course, one of the primary reasons for colonization. In the section of the country in which George Slawson (1) settled and rose to prominence practically all were staunch Puritans—including George Slawson. There was only one place of religious worship in a settlement, and it was generally referred to simply as "the Church", without any designation as to creed. Most, if not all, of "the Churches" in this part of the country are now known as Congregational Churches. However, there are few churches of this creed spread throughout the country, and if a member of the Congregational faith moved to a location not having this particular creed, his church membership could be transferred to the Presbyterian Church, as the differences are but slight. Also, the change from either of these to Methodist or Baptist called for no radical adjustments of faith, and these changes were often made. In the passage of time, religious fervor has gradually become less and less the predominating influence in people's lives, and with it has come a widening of the creeds to which the members of the family adhere. Although the family was originally Protestant, various members have at one time or another married Catholics, and the descendants of these unions are almost always Catholics, and today a fair proportion of the family embrace this religion. Methodists probably make up the largest single denomination in point of membership in the family today, although there is scarcely a creed which does not have some of the members of the family counted among its members. There are also some members of the family who belong to no creed and whose church attendance is, to say the least, quite limited.

Occupation . . .

In the early days of settlement, each individual was largely dependent on what he could grow for his personal use. Hence, practically all were farmers. The only class originally set apart were ministers, but even they devoted a fair part of their time to farming. Gradually other occupations arose, but in general they were part time affairs. A man might act as a miller a few days a week in the season, but the rest of the time he, too, tilled the soil. As the passage of time brought other full time trades into being, more and more of the family gave up their farms and went into the professions and a wide variety of other businesses. Today, less than half the family are still on the farms, although it does make up by far the largest single pursuit.

No attempt has been made in these records to state what occupation each person follows. The reasons for this are several: the compiler does not always know (although this would cover less than ten percent of the family); individuals have a tendency to change from one job to another as their economic needs dictate; and then, too, there is always the plain human element which does not care for contrasts. The bank president does not care to be reminded in print that his brother is the town odd-job man, and the compiler suspects that the odd-job man does not relish being reminded of his brother's success in comparison to his own.

Occupation and religion are both controversial subjects, and have been carefully omitted in the text, except that when an individual is the possessor of a title (i.e., Judge, Dr., Rev., etc.) it has been included as a token of respect.

General Information

The numbers at the left of each name are assigned generally in each generation on the basis of the first number being assigned to the first child of the eldest son, and working in order to the youngest child of the youngest son.

The numbers in the right hand column refer to the proper locations in the following or preceding generations. Thus, the number to the right of the parents' names refers to the preceding generation, where their records may be found. Numbers to the right of the information of a male member of the family, refer to the number assigned to his eldest child, and his children will be found starting with that number. Numbers to the right of a female member of the family (except those few who married other members of the family) refer to their descendants, which will be found grouped in the Appendix (numbers 5001 and up).

In the later generations, open numbers have been intentionally left, for use of inserting any additional members of the family that may be born or whose proper connections may be later proved. The numbers used and omitted are, in general, the following:

1st	1—2	——
2nd	3—6	——
3rd	7—21	——
4th	22—61	——

First Generation

Children of Richard and Anne (Angell) Slawson Intro.

1 I. GEORGE SLAWSON born between 1611 and 1617 (probably about 1616), at Southwark, Surry, England. Emigrated to America, in all probability arriving on the ship "Jonas", which landed in 1636. Moved out of Lynn, Massachusetts, in 1637, with a group of other persons to Sandwich, Massachusetts. The name of his first wife (mother of all his children), whom he married at Sandwich (circ. 1640) is unknown. They moved to Stamford, Connecticut, in 1642, and settled there. Married (2) December 16, 1680, at Fairfield, Connecticut, MARY WILLIAMS (JENNINGS), the widow of Joshua Jennings. There were no children by this second marriage. He died February 17, 1694/5, at Stamford, and she died in March, 1697. Prior to his arrival in Stamford, his name was infallibly spelled SLAWSON, but the Stamford records usually referred to him as SLASON. According to his own writing, he used both spellings, apparently without too much discrimination, although SLAWSON is the way he used more frequently. 3

Authors of local histories pertaining to the New England colonies agree that George and Thomas (2) Slawson were in Lynn, Massachusetts, in 1637, and that their names were included in the list of those who went from Lynn, Duxbury and Plymouth to form the new colony at Sandwich. Unfortunately, the early records of Sandwich are very meagre, due largely to a fire that destroyed most of them. Freeman's "History of Cape Cod" mentions George Slawson only briefly —once for being fined for being deficient in arms, and once for receiving a sum of money for erecting a fence. Also, at Sandwich, George Slawson took the oath of fidelity and became a freeman. This is important in view of the fact it proved him to be of mature age (at least) at that time, and of good character. This latter point is further emphasized by Hinman in his history, "The First Puritan Settlers", which states: "Slawson was a firm Puritan and a good man", and also: "Bell, in company with Slawson, were favorably noticed by Cotton Mather". George Slawson was a part of that band which Freeman describes as follows: "The early settlers here (in Sandwich) were not those usually denominated Pilgrims. They were in fact, or generally in some respect, a different order of men, all probably non-conformists and Puritans, and it is probable that religious considerations had much to do with the emigration of most of them".

The settlement at Sandwich could not have been very satisfactory to either George or Thomas (2) Slawson, for in 1642 they both emigrated to the newly formed settlement of Rippawan, or Stamford as it was at that time beginning to be called. There is on record a sale of land by George Slawson, said land being located in Duxbury, Massachusetts, but as far as can be found, he never actually occupied this land. However, it is known that Thomas reached Stamford early in 1642 and that George arrived with his wife and child late in the year.

Thus, these two brothers, whom persistent rumor claims left their home in Surry, England, as much for differences of opinion with their parents as for religious reasons, were without question, the sole progenitors of the family in America. As Thomas Slawson's line dies out after two more generations, it does little to becloud or otherwise tend to complicate the work of constructing the family tree. As the name of Slawson (by any spelling) does not appear upon records of any of the other settlements up to 1650, it is obvious that George Slawson was the pioneer ancestor of the Slason, Slauson, Slawson and Slosson families in America. (See introduction).

Stamford supplies most of the material known about George Slawson's activities, and for much of the information the compiler of this work is indebted to Rev. E. B. Huntington's "History of Stamford."

In 1640, a company of men dissatisfied with conditions in Wethersfield decided to break away and start a new settlement of their own. They applied to the New Haven Colony for land to be used for the purchase of the land south of what is now Norwalk. Twenty-nine men pledged themselves under penalty of forfeiture of five pounds each, to go or send someone to Rippawan, as Stamford was then known, by May 1641. This was the beginning of Stamford.

By 1642 the population had increased to fifty-nine families. Included in this list were the names of George and Thomas Slawson. Savage, in his remarkable record of New England colonists states that Thomas Slawson came to Stamford from Sandwich with Captain John Underhill and Henry Ackerly in 1641, while Huntington claims he came a year later. George Slawson arrived with Thomas Armitage sometime in 1642.

At a town meeting in October 1642, land was allotted to new arrivals, and at that time Thomas Slawson was given a house-lot and three acres in the field. No record is found of the original allotment of land to George Slawson, but that he received such an allotment is indicated by the record of "Lands of George Slawson, with bounds . . . " as recorded in 1650.

In order to accurately visualize the conditions in the colonies it is necessary, though difficult, to fully appreciate the extent to which religion entered into and governed every act of the colonists. Of the Stamford Colony, Huntington states:

"Church membership was the test of citizenship. No man could vote or be eligible to any civil or military office who did not first qualify himself by a credible profession of religion. For twenty years therefore, all the freemen (of which George Slawson was one) and officers of the town were taken from the church. That such a policy could give satisfaction in a community in which but a minority of the adult population were church members could not rationally be expected. And the evidence that it was here an impracable theory of government is found in the fact that it did not long succeed.

"The limitation of the franchise to church members by the New Haven government was the occasion of much dissatisfaction among the Stamford colonists. There were also other prohibitions in the fundamental laws of the colony which were not to be borne. Every man was forbidden to use any discourteous language toward the minister, or regarding his preaching, and every person was to attend Meeting on the Lord's Day, at least, and on days of public fasting or Thanksgiving. No person was allowed to broach or maintain any dangerous error or heresy. No sinful or servile work, no unlawful sport or recreation was allowed on the Sabbath." It was also ordered that no Quaker, rantor, or other heretic of that nature, be suffered to come into nor abide in the jurisdiction and "if any rise up among ourselves that they be speedily suppressed and secured, for the better prevention of such errors." However, the affairs of the church did not always run smoothly. Scarcely three years passed over the colony before some disagreement between the minister and his people arose which led to his removal.

"And what can this isolated people do? There were no ministers, as now, within calling distance in readiness to fill such openings. Coming to gather, after much deliberation and prayer, the people selected two of their most trustworthy members, Lieut. Francis Bell and George Slawson, furnished them with food for the way, and sent them on foot to Boston to see if they could not find one John Bishop, whose name had been reported to them, or some minister whom they could persuade to come back with them, so that this people might not be scattered and 'suffered to sin against the ordinances of God'."

Luckily they found Mr. Bishop, "a young man on whom was the seal of consecration and of promise, and with much persuasion they prevailed upon him to accept this pressing call from the Lord."

Evidently as a result of this, George Slawson was frequently called upon to act in the affairs of the church, both in Stamford and at the General Court in New Haven.

In May 1656, at a magistrate's court in New Haven, Richard Law and George Slawson were the deputies from the church in Stamford. These two made complaint against

Jno. Mead. They declared that John had said he could get into the church shortly and then he should be at liberty to "lye, steal, be drunke or anything." Here indeed was a dangerous pronouncement that could not be tolerated.

By 1672 the labors of Mr. Bishop had become too great a burden for one man to bear, and at a town meeting it was voted to call Mr. Jones as assistant "if he remove from Greenwich." Mr. Holly and Senior Slawson were chosen to consider "how to accomade Mr. Jones soe it may not pregudis the towne and to present it toe the towne for confirmation". Evidently they were successful, for in January 1673 at a town meeting: "Committee appointed to lay out land unto Mr. Jones. Mr. Law, Senior Bell, Senior Slawson, William Newman, and Richard Webb." Then again in February at a town meeting "The towne doth appoint and impower Mr. Law, Lef't Bell, Mr. Holly and George Slawson a committee to provide a house and for hiring a convenience of meadow for Mr. Jones".

That delinquent parishioners were in evidence even then is noted by the record of a town meeting in September 1676 when "the towne doth impower Senior Slawson and Daniel Wescot as collectors to gather up all former minister rates, as also the rates of this year".

Turning now to another feature regarding the colony at Stamford, that pertaining to the relations with the Indians, it is found that of the six treaties with the Indians, two or three are of particular interest.

These first treaty, made in 1640, resulted in the purchase of the land of Rippawan (or Stamford). The second treaty, made in 1645, between the white settlers and Piamikin and other sagamores, was witnessed by George Slawson and Jeremy Jagger. This treaty is recorded in the New Haven Colony Records.

As a preliminary to one of the other treaties, at a town meeting in 1667 "it is noted that Richard Law, Francis Bell, John Holly, George Slawson, and Jonathan Selleck are chosen to agree and receive of Taphose and Onax such further assurance of the township and land aboute and belonging to it, as they can make with him, and for what juste charge they shall see cause to expende about it shall be payed by the towne in generall". There resulted the treaty of 1667 signed by Taphance and Penahay for the Indians, and by Richard Law, Francis Bell, George Slawson, Jonathan Selleck and John Holly for the whites, in the presence of Richard Beach, John Embry and Samuel Mills.

Then again, at a town meeting in February 1673, it was noted "A committee to treat with the Ingines in order to thir settling upon Long Necke, namely Mr. Law, Mr. Holly, Lef't Bell, Senior Richard Ambler, Senior Slawson, Jonathan Selleck and John Green, which men have full power committed to them by the towne to make agreement with said Ingines according to the conditions that were proposed at this meeting." Evidently the treaty was made, although it is not on file.

However, George Slawson went in for other civic duties. In 1657, he, with Richard Law and John Waterbury were appointed deputies from Stamford to the General Court assembled in New Haven. These three continued to officiate until 1663 when John Holly was selected to fill the vacancy caused by the death of John Waterbury.

The name of George Slawson (or Slason, as the town clerk usually spelled it) was frequently mentioned in town meetings, a few of which are mentioned below.

May 25, 1659—At General Court in New Haven, Francis Bell chosen Constable for Stamford and George Slason marshall to assist him.

1664—At a town meeting Cornelius Jones, Seely, George Slason and Jno. Holly chosen viewers of fences of fields.

1664—It is ordered that Richard Ambler, George Slason and William Newman are chosen to lay out lands for Richard Webb.

May 29, 1667—It is noted that George Slason and Daniel Scofield are chosen viewers for the Shippan, are to go forth next Thursday and for what fence they find materially defective shall forfeit according to the order about the horse pasture.

Dec. 3, 1667—It is ordered that a planting field or fields be laid out that shall contain a competency of land for every inhabitant as they are capable in respect to right. Mr. Richard Law, Richard Ambler, John Holly, George Slason, John Bates and Edmund Lockwood are chosen to take surview of bounds of town to see where there might be most convenient field or fields to be laid out for planting and then they are to give a report to the town when they find it.

Dec. 19, 1667—It was ordered that seven viewer men should order the fields that are now to be taken—these included George Slason.

Jan. 1668—At a town meeting it was voted that Francis Bell, John Holly, George Slawson, Richard Ambler and Francis Brown are to be townsmen this year ensuing and to act in all the town business except giving away lands.

Feb. 1668—For viewer of highways for Rocky Neck, George Slason.

Feb. 1671—Chosen for townsmen George Slason, John Petit, John Holmes, Joshua Hoit, and John Slason.

March 2, 1684—By vote the town doth appoint George Slason, John Green Senior collectors for gathering up the rates that are made and are to be made for the year.

Feb. 28, 1675—Chosen for townsmen for ensuing year Mr. Law, Left Francis Bell, Senior Slason, Richard Harney and John Green.

June 5, 1676—At a town meeting, "The town doth appoint George Slason to defend the case or cases that are or shall be commenced against the town by the widow Sarah Petit or her order, concerning fence or otherwise, and by vote do give him full power to act as attorney at the court or courts and do give the said Slason full power to choose and impower an attorney or attornies under him as he shall see cause until the full issue of the whole case or cases, to appeal or review as he shall see cause, always acting according to law to the best of his skill."

1690—By vote are chosen for pounders the ensuing year. . . . George Slason for Rocky Neck.

Occasionally George Slawson got himself tangled with the law, but never with any serious results, except the time he was fined ten shillings for being deficient in arms, which event took place at Sandwich, Mass., before he came to Stamford. However, in 1644, at a magistrate's court in New Haven, Thomas Stevenson and George Slason were charged with neglect of duty in permitting a prisoner to escape.

It appears that they were appointed to guard a person accused of murdering a Captain Patrick. The prisoner was confined in Captain Underhill's home and escaped during the night. The testimony of Slason was to the effect: The prisoner was allowed to go to bed in an adjoining chamber at the suggestion of Captain Underhill, but that he, Slason, objected. Mrs. Underhill, a Dutch woman, did not take the protest kindly, and was sustained by Captain Underhill who stated he had talked with the prisoner who had told him he did not wish to escape as he had no place to go.

The case was held over for the next term of court, but no further mention was made of it.

Then, again, on Oct. 19, 1659, at a magistrate's court in New Haven, Robert Usher was the complainant against George Slason concerning a stray horse. It appears from the testimony that a stray horse made its way into a three acre pea-field of George Slason and ate nearly an acre. George, aided by his son, John, rounded up the horse and took it to the pound, but the pounder did not know to whom the horse belonged. George Slason therefore turned it loose in the woods. Usher later claimed the horse and the suit followed. The court ordered Usher to pay Slason for the horse's keep and to deposit with the poundsman an amount equal to the value of the horse in the event another claimant appeared with better title.

On April 22, 1667, at a town meeting it was ordered that "all such inhabitants of Stamford that intend to have any privilege in the horse-pasture are to give in their names to the recorder for one horse or two that they will fence for." There follows a long list, including:

George Slason 1
John Slason 1
Eliezer Slason 1

There are several records of George Slason being appointed an executor of an estate or witness to a will, but these are very minor incidents in his life.

There are also many records of George Slason buying or selling land, as well as several transcripts of lands belonging to him. The transcript of September 26, 1678, shows the following:

An home lot containing 3 acres more or less . . .

In Rocky Neck an acre and half of upland more or less. . . .

In the Southfield three acres of meadow and two acres of upland adjoining, more or less, bounded . . .

In the Northfield six acres upland, more or less, bounded by . . .

In the woods above Toylson one acre and half of meadow, more or less (the same parcel of meadow commonly called Whitmore's meadow) bounded by . . .

This amounted to rather considerable holdings in those days. There are records of allotments of other acreage to the extent of six acres, thirty-eight acres, and fourteen acres, beside the land he purchased at odd times.

In Oct. 1680—"I George Slason having formerly given unto my son-in-law John Gold a house and lands situated in Stamford do hereby confirm such gift, etc., a part or portion having to do with my daughter Hana."

Feb. 16, 1686—George Slason gave a houselot to Eliezer Slason and nine acres of upland. Under the same date he gave several parcels of land to John Slason.

Relative to George Slason's marriages, it has been stated before that the name of his first wife was unknown. The marriage covenant with his second wife, however, was recorded and was as follows:

"Whereas thar is an Intended mariage to bee Solemnised betwne george Slawson of Stamford and mary ginings of

It seems strange that in all the years covered by the records there is no mention whatsoever of his first wife, and no other mention of his second wife except in 1684—"An inventory of the clothes of Rebbecca Bell diseased, the wife of Francis Bell, appraised by Goodwife Slason and Mrs. Holly, . . . "

With the exception of the will this is the last of the records concerning George Slawson. The will was as follows (filed Nov. 3, 1695) (English modernized):

"This is the last will and testiment of George Slawson, living in Stamford in the county of Fairfield in the Connecticut jurisdiction, being in his perfect memory and understanding.

"Impr. I make my two sons John Slawson and Eliezer Slawson joint executors of all my worldly goods, both real and personal.

"2nd. I bequeth and give unto these my two sons John and Eliezer equal alike portions, and the reason is because my son Eliezer stayed longer with me than my son John and he was a greater help to me in that respect and also I gave my son John more than I gave the other and this I do beside what he already hath received.

"3rd. I do will these my two sons to pay unto my loving wife her just dues according to my marriage covenant, and her clothing mentioned in her writing, and also my will is she should have liberty of my house and provision for a small or convenient season till she may remove, and when she removes she shall have quantity of half barrell of pork for she hath been a loving wife to me, also that my executors pay all just debts due from my estate to themselves and others.

"4th. I do give unto my daughter, John Gold's wife, besides what she hath received of me, twenty pounds out of my estate and further, it is my will to add five pounds more to the twenty in case the estate will bear it and the executors be not wronged."

Codicil dated Stamford Jan. 9, 1694—"Upon more deliberation of the above named testator, do by my will appoint my two sons, and they only, to be administrators upon my estate, after my decease, in case they see cause to take the work of executors upon them.

"In witness of truth, I have hereunto set my hand,

Witness: GEORGE S( )ON*

Abraham Ambler
Samuel Holly"

The inventory of the effects of George Slawson, who died the 17th day of February 1694/5.

First, the administrators did give and grant to the widow, their step-mother, one frying pan, one pewter platter, one basin, one pewter cup, one wooden bowl, five pewter spoons, about eight pounds of linen and woolen yarn, five pillow bears, and one old tablecloth.

There follows an inventory consisting of a long list of clothing and household and farming utensils, three old Bibles, and a sword and belt, all of which were appraised. This was followed by the land holdings, which consisted of the following:

House, barn and homelot.
10 acres in Northfield.
2 acres meadow in Southfield.
1 acre meadow in the Neck.
Land on back side of Ox pasture.
6 acres land at Ponsesses.
Half acre in open neck.
5 acres in horse pasture.
Rights of land in Noroton Neck.
Land in Fresh Meadow.

Value of the estate: 185£, 11 s, 6 d.

*It is to be regretted that his own penmanship does not here show clearly the spelling of his name, but the marriage contract, which was copied verbatim (and the only document so copied on these pages) does prove conclusively that when George Slawson wrote his own name the "W" was usually included.

2 11. THOMAS SLAWSON born probably about 1620 at Southwark, Surry, England. Emigrated to America. Was in Sandwich in 1638. Moved to Stamford, Fairfield County, Connecticut, in either 1641 or 1642. Apparently did not like Stamford, and returned to Plymouth County, Massachusetts, where he married, although the name of his wife is unknown. Believed to have died before 1655. 6

(There were undoubtedly other children in this family, but only these two came to America, the others remaining in England.)

Second Generation

Children of George and ——— Slawson 1

3 I. JOHN SLAWSON born May 14, 1641, at Sandwich, Barnstable County, Massachusetts. Moved to Stamford, Fairfield County, Connecticut, with his parents in 1642. Married (1) November 22, 1663, at Stamford, SARAH TUTTLE, baptized April 1642 (at New Haven, Connecticut), daughter of William and Elizabeth Tuttle. She was murdered with an axe, November 17, 1676, by her brother, Benjamin Tuttle, who was duly hanged for the crime in 1677. Married (2) about 1679 probably at Stamford, ELIZABETH BENEDICT, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Bridgum*) Benedict. They moved to Bedford, Westchester County, New York, in 1681, being influenced to do so by his brother, Eliezer (4), who was one of the original patentees of that town. John did not like Bedford, and very shortly returned to Stamford, making the error of selling his land in Bedford without obtaining the necessary consent of the town itself. The land was promptly confiscated by the town, and it was only through his brother's influence that the matter was straightened out and new land assigned to John. This new land was then sold with the town's consent, and by 1682 or 1683 he was again a resident of Stamford, where his second wife died about 1688. Married (3) HANNAH PRUNDERSON (GIBBS), baptised May 1642 at New Haven, daughter of John Prunderson, and widow of John Gibbs. He died October 16, 1706, at Stamford, and she died January 18, 1715/6, at Norwalk, Fairfield County, Connecticut. 7

4 II. ELIEZER (ELEAZER) SLASON, born February 9, 1642/3, at Stamford, Fairfield County, Connecticut. Became one of the original patentees of Bedford, Westchester County, New York, and resided there although he never gave up his holdings in Stamford. Married (1) in 1675 or 1676, probably at Bedford, MARY CHAPMAN, daughter of John Chapman, and half-sister of Thomas Lawrence†. After her death, he married (2) in 1680, probably at Bedford, SUSANNA BRIGGS, born November 5, 1651, daughter of William and 14

*—As in the case with most names in these days, spellings were frequently on a phonetic basis, which gave rise to many variations. This name is spelled as "Bridgham" and "Brigham" in various other records, and undoubtedly the latter spelling is the one generally accepted.

†—Some genealogies refer to her as Mary Lawrence. This is not correct, as she was only a step-relative to the Lawrence family, although brought up in the household after her mother married into it as a second marriage.

Thomasine Belding*. Returned to Stamford about 1697, where he died in May, 1698. She died in 1706 at Stamford.

5 III. HANNAH SLASON (or HANNA) born about 1644 to 1646 at Stamford, Fairfield County, Connecticut. Married (1) probably at Stamford, JOHN GOLD (or GOULD). After his death, she married (2) September 20, 1714, at Stamford, (Deacon) SAMUEL HOIT, becoming his third wife. She is probably the one referred to as "ye aintiant Widow Hoit", who died January 27, 1729/30 at Stamford. —

Child of Thomas and ——— Slawson 2

6 I. JOSIAH SLAWSON born about 1648, probably at Sandwich, Barnstable County, Massachusetts. Married March 12, 1678/9 at Marshfield, Plymouth County, Massachusetts, MARY WILLIAMSON, born July 7, 1654, daughter of Timothy and Mary (Howland) Williamson. He is believed to have died about 1683 at Bedford, Westchester County, New York. 20

*—No actual marriage record seems to exist, and although there is no question that her given name was Susanna, there has never previously been an effort to establish her maiden name as Belding. With direct proof lacking, this conclusion has been reached by certain other corroborating data, which is explained more fully under the note following her son, Nathaniel (19). It would appear from the evidence available that she came to Bedford as a married woman, and that she was a widow at the time of her marriage to Eleazer Slason. No record has been found covering any previous marriage, and the compiler, although morally convinced the statement is correct, does not submit it as a fact. William and Thomasine Belding were among the early and prominent settlers of Deerfield, Massachusetts, although the town was not settled until after Susanna Belding was born. There is also no doubt that the Belding family of Deerfield and the Belden family of Norwalk were one and the same family. The Deerfield records usually used the Belding spelling, and these records make frequent references to the individuals of the family who moved to Norwalk. The Norwalk records rarely spell the name other than Belden, although the Belding spelling is known. Whenever the name enters the records of Stamford there seems to be an unsettled quality to the matter and both spellings are used on occasion, apparently indiscriminately. The Deerfield records show Susanna's birthdate and connection to the family, and trace the relationships mentioned in the note following her son, Nathaniel (19).

Third Generation

Children of John and Sarah (Tuttle) Slawson 3

7 I. JOHN SLAUSON born September 9, 1664, at Stamford, Fairfield County, Connecticut. Moved to Norwalk, Fairfield County, Connecticut, before 1708. Married MARY HOLMES, daughter of Stephen and Martha Holmes. "Mr. John and Mistress Mary Slauson died August 20, 1745." 22

8 II. SARAH SLASON born January 20, 1667, at Stamford, Fairfield County, Connecticut. Married October 2, 1700, at Stamford, EBENEZER BISHOP. She died January 11, 1733/4 at Stamford. —

9 III. JONATHAN SLAWSON (Ensign) born July 25, 1670, at Stamford, Fairfield County, Connecticut. Married (1) January (or February) 4, 1698/9, at Stamford, MARY WATERBURY, daughter of John and Mary Waterbury. She was born March 20, 1679, and died at Stamford May 12, 1710. Married (2) July 11, 1711, at Stamford, ROSE STEVENS, born October 14, 1683, daughter of Obadiah and Rebecca (Rose) Stevens. He died November 19, 1727, at Stamford. No record of her death has been found. 30

10 IV. ELIZABETH SLASON born June 30, 1672, at Stamford, Fairfield County, Connecticut. Married at Stamford, NATHANIEL POND. She died May 11, 1711, at Stamford. —

Children of John and Elizabeth (Benedict) Slawson 3

11 V. MARY ELIZABETH SLAWSON born April 21, 1680, at Stamford, Fairfield County, Connecticut. Married December 25, 1707, at Stamford, her second cousin, JOSEPH SLAWSON (20), born 1680 at Bedford(?), Westchester County, New York. They settled in Bedford, but apparently had no children. —

12 VI. THOMAS SLASON, born March 11, 1681 (one record claims February 3, 1681/2), at Stamford, Fairfield County, Connecticut. Married at Stamford April 14, 1709, SARAH STEVENS, born January 27, 1686, daughter of Joseph Stevens. Thomas died March 30, 1710, at Stamford. She married (2) February 13, 1711/2 at Stamford, Jabez Smith. (39)

13 VII. HANNAH SLASON born March 12, 1685/6, at Stamford, Fairfield County, Connecticut. Died young. —

Children of Eliezer and Mary (Chapman) Slason 4

14 I. ELEAZER SLASON born at Bedford, Westchester County, New York. Married May 9, 1711, at Stamford, Fairfield County, Connecticut, HANNAH WEBB, daughter of Joseph 40 and Hannah Webb. She died June 26, 1723, at Stamford. He resided at Greenwich, Fairfield County, Connecticut, and later moved to New York state, where he died.

15 II. MARTHA SLASON born at Bedford, Westchester County, New York. —

Children of Eliezer and Susanna (Belding) Slason 4

16 III. JAMES SLASON born February 1680/1 at Bedford, Westchester County, New York. Married (1) December 3, 1702, at Stamford, Fairfield County, Connecticut, MEHETABLE (MEHITTABEL) AMBLER, daughter of Abraham and Mary (Bates) Ambler. She died February 8, 1736/7, at Stamford. Married (2) SARAH JAGGER (WEBSTER), daughter of Jeremy Jagger, and widow of John Webster. There were no children by this second marriage. He died before May 16, 1759, and she died near the end of the same year, both at Stamford. 41

17 IV. SUSANNA SLASON born about 1683 at Bedford, Westchester County, New York. Married October 24, 1700, at Stamford, Fairfield County, Connecticut, SAMUEL HOIT, son son of (Deacon) Samuel Hoit who later married her aunt, Hannah Slason (5), as his third wife. She died March 26, 1706/7, at Stamford. —

18 V. EBENEZER SLASON born about 1688 at Bedford, Westchester County, New York. Married, probably at Bedford, ANN ———. 49

19 VI. NATHANIEL SLOSSON born 1696, probably at Bedford, Westchester County, New York. Moved to Stamford, Fairfield County, Connecticut, with his parents, about 1697. He was left a full orphan in 1706, and removed to Deerfield, Franklin County, Massachusetts, where he was raised by his mother's relatives*. About 1717 or 1718 he returned to Connecticut, and resided in Norwalk, Fairfield County. Married December 11, 1719, at Deerfield, MARGARET BELDING, born February 10, 1700/1, daughter of William and Margaret (Arms) Belding (Belden). They resided at Norwalk (mostly in the portion now known as Wilton) until 1739, when they became part of the original group of settlers at Kent, Litchfield County, Connecticut, where she died April 14, 1780, and he died March 8, 1787. They are interred in the family cemetery at Kent. 50

*—Nathaniel, after being orphaned, was brought up by Daniel Belding (1648—1731), who was undoubtedly related to his mother. This is further substantiated by the fact that Daniel Belding had a sister, Susanna, and was therefore in all probability Nathaniel's uncle. Daniel Belding's son was William Belding, who married Margaret Arms, and their eldest child was Margaret Belding, who married Nathaniel. Nathaniel and his wife were, therefore, first cousins, once removed. With Nathaniel, the SLOSSON spelling of the name is first used, and with the exception of his two eldest children (daughters), all the descendants of Nathaniel have used this spelling. His father's (Eliezer's) will, mentioning him by name, was proved under the name SLASON. His marriage record, on file in Deerfield, gives his name as SLASSON. When he returned from Deerfield to Norwalk with his bride, he purchased land on February 24, 1720/1 and made a further purchase on March 1, 1720/1. In both these deeds he was "Nathaniel SLASON". On November 16, 1721, Samuel Belden (Belding) (For differences of spelling of this name, see note following Eliezer Slason [3]) presented him with a deed for rights in land "in consideration of the love and good will I have and do bear toward my cousin, Nathaniel Slawson of said Norwalk". This is particularly interesting for two reasons: first; the reference to his "cousin". Previous genealogists, failing to have the connection between Nathaniel's mother and the Belding family, interpreted this to mean "cousin" as a result of his marriage to Margaret Belding. Actually Samuel meant what he stated when he said "cousin", and it is somewhat far reasoning for him to be guilty of publicly stating his "love" for a cousin-in-law. Nor did the donor say "Nathaniel Slawson, husband of my cousin, Margaret Slawson", which would be the usual phraseology in those days of meticulous accuracy as attested by the many documents so worded that are on file for other families, as well as other branches of this family. On close scrutiny, there seems to be no question that Samuel Belden (Belding) was acknowledging the blood relation existing between himself and Nathaniel Slawson. The second interesting point is the spelling of the name—SLAWSON. The town clerks had insisted on the spelling of the name as SLASON for many years in this portion of Connecticut, although the individuals frequently continued with the use of SLAWSON without consulting the wishes of the town clerks, and here is an odd confirmation of this. Please note that in this period of his life, Nathaniel had been recorded variously as SLAWSON, SLASON and SLASSON, but never as SLOSSON. On November 11, 1738, Nathaniel purchased "one right, Part, share or allotment in ye Township of Kent, lately sold by ye Government, which is in said colony of Connecticut. . . ." from Ebenezer Bishop of Stamford, husband of his first cousin, Sarah Slason (8). In November 1739 Nathaniel and his family, together with a list of other families, moved out of Norwalk to settle on this land. The list is shown in the records of Norwalk, and specifies "Nathaniel SLASON". The first entry in the town records of Kent lists the same group as new arrivals, and includes "Nathaniel SLOSSON". From 1739 on, this branch of the family has used the SLOSSON spelling, with the exception that his son, Nathan, is carried on the rolls of Revolutionary soldiers as "Nathan SLAWSON" (59).

†—The Shakers are a religious body, so called from their use of dancing in their worship. Proper title is The Millenial Church, or United Society of Believers in Christ's Second Coming. Originated in England by a Quaker. Brought to this country by Ann Lee (1736—1784) in 1776. The Shakers do not believe in marriage or private property and do not have carnal relations. All property is community owned and each toils for the good of the whole. The main colony is at Mt. Lebanon in the township of New Lebanon, Columbia County, New York. Other colonies are at Watervliet, New York; Hancock, Massachusetts; Sabbathday Lake, Maine; and Enfield, New Hampshire. The parent organization at Mt. Lebanon was divided into families (as were the others, also) known as the Church Family (wherein was located their church of worship), the North Family, the East Family, the First Family, the Second Family, etc. At Mt. Lebanon there were eight families. They obtained extensive property holdings, given by their incoming members, and were largely self supporting, although certain income was derived from the sale of garden seeds, etc., and lately by selling maple sugar, etc. Members were sent out from this parent body to fill such deficiencies as might occur in the other colonies. Any member was at liberty to resign at will, but could take no property with him. No new members have been accepted since 1930, and as the body is self-eradicating, it is rapidly dying out, only about 150 members being now left in all colonies (1936). They are at present eking out a living by selling land to pay taxes, selling off furniture, cloaks, etc. The records of the organization were largely destroyed by fire, although the death-book, dating back to 1780 was saved, and forms the base for a large part of the knowledge utilized in reference to the members of this family who joined the Shakers.

*—This Eleazer Slason is frequently confused with Eleazer Slauson, his son, as both served in the same regiment in the War. (190). Eleazer Slason, shown above, resided almost on the present Lewisboro-North Salem line and when he died was buried in the Cemetery which was then situated on the bottom of what is now the Titicus Reservoir. The State of New York moved the graves from this site before the construction of the reservoir, and they are now located on a hillside south of the reservoir. There is no way to identify Eleazer Slason's grave, as it was probably marked only with a fieldstone. Eleazer Slauson, the son, resided and died at Poundridge.

Appendix

In the next few pages are shown descendants of members of the family, other than those born with the family name; affiliations, etc. This information has been submitted for inclusison, and none of it has been verified by checking of official records.

These added items are numbered by groups only—no separate number being assigned to each individual; and have been entered as received, in no particular order, as each group is in itself a family record. The numbers in parentheses refer to the numbers assigned to the members of the family in the regular text, and being completely cross-referenced as well as indexed, should in the opinion of the compiler cause no difficulty.

The children of a member of the family are numbered regularly 1, 2, 3, etc. The grandchildren are shown immediately following their parents, and are numbered a), b), c), etc. The great-grandchildren are shown immediately following their parents, and are numbered i), ii), iii), etc.
